

Dear Huron Heights Families,

We are sending out a reminder that this coming Friday, November 8th is an Instructional Support day. This day can be used by students to get caught up on work and/or connect with teachers either virtually or in person. Classroom teachers can work with students on assignment completion, and/or offer additional opportunities for students to demonstrate a skill or curriculum expectation that has been missed or requires further support.

- Students are not required to attend remotely or in-person unless instructed by a teacher.
- Teachers will communicate with their students the expectation/schedule for those days in advance. Though many students may be working from home, students can engage with the teacher virtually (e.g. conferencing/feedback sessions; participation in the virtual classroom; submitting owed work; etc.)
- Please note that if a student is invited by the teacher, and does not attend, that student will be marked absent.
- ACE and Bridges students will attend school with regular programming and following regular attendance procedures
- Transportation will run at regular times
- Teaching staff will be in attendance at school during these days.
- The day will follow a regular school day schedule:
